Chapter 1 by Archestereo

Steve Rogers isn't happy about his roll in the Civil War Re-enactment; he has worn blue all his life. Worse yet, Tony Stark outranked him.

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

But he doesn't dwell on it. At least they have the day off for Saint Patrick's day. Maybe he can rediscover New York today.

Chapter 3 by food4fish

Under the relative concealment of his favorite American Eagle hoodie, Cap strolled through the bustling streets of Manhatten. His mind wandered just like his feet, but it was memories of the Great War, of the Red Skull and of a sharp decent from blue sky to black ocean which had his attention, not his surroundings. A fact he would soon come to regret.

Chapter 5 by PierceTheKenleigh

He picked it up, studying the simple beauty. Beauty that had been rare during the war. The war that had left pain in him, he felt it had happened just yesterday, it left him feeling raw and tender on the inside, like anything could tear him apart. Steve told himself to not let his feelings distract him, and to focus on the now. He carefully set the easter egg on a park bench and slowly walked away.

Chapter 6 by Jake Red

Little did he know that the wind disagreed with his actions as it punched the egg to the ground. It rolled once more to his feet which made him ponder "could this be a sign?".

Chapter 7 by Artemis

Steve eyed the little egg carefully, and picked it up. As he started to stash it in his pocket, it began to vibrate, and he gasped in shock.

(Remember only 140 characters)

Chapter 8 by Artemis

He puts the egg down, and as soon as his flesh leaves the egg, the vibration stops. Steve picks it up once more. It vibrates. "Tony! Help!"
